

Paris Smith becomes one of The Rainbow Centre 100 Club

Regional law firm Paris Smith has pledged its support for the work of a charity which provides support to children and adults across the Wessex region who suffer the effects of Cerebral Palsy, Multiple Sclerosis and Parkinson's. The Rainbow Centre, which operates in Fareham, is recognised for its work across the Hampshire, Dorset, West Sussex and the Isle of Wight in the provision of vital services to children and adults with such conditions and those recovering from stroke and head injury.

Rainbow Centre Director, Lara Bull said "The Rainbow Centre receives no statutory funding. The objective of the 'The 100 Club' is to provide an opportunity for companies in the region to give much needed financial support to the running costs of the charity on a monthly basis. The Club will in turn create a network of like-minded businesses that both support our work and are able to share and develop relationships between themselves."

Paris Smith's Managing Partner, Peter Taylor "We are delighted to continue our support for The Rainbow Centre and become part of 'The 100 club'. We have witnessed the huge difference which the work of such a talented and passionate team makes to the lives of those in our region that are less fortunate than many of us. One cannot fail to be humbled and Paris Smith is delighted to pledge its support to help ensure the invaluable service provided by The Rainbow Centre continues and thrives so that more people can benefit from it. I encourage other business leaders in the region to see for themselves the work done by Lara and her team. I am sure they will be similarly moved to join The 100 Club."

The Rainbow Centre has recently become a member of Paris Smith's Charity Forum, a forum bringing charities and companies operating in the voluntary sector together to share their knowledge and expertise.
